Organizational Costs and Benefits of a Health System Quality Improvement Intervention to Increase Aspirin Use for Primary Prevention of Heart Attack and Stroke

<sup>1</sup>University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN

Abstract
Performance improvement on clinical quality outcomes typically requires significant effort by personnel in health care organizations. Understanding the cost of quality improvement to represent given affiliates of value-based contracting. This study investigates the organizational costs and benefits associated with planning and implementing the Ask About Aspirin intervention to increase use of low-dose aspirin in clinically recommended patient populations. Data from 6 health systems in Minnesota were used to estimate personnel effort and labor resource costs as well as corresponding benefits, measured as the change in aspirin use among eligible conditions during the study period. Overall personnel effort across the 6 systems was approximately 2900 hours with corresponding increase costs estimated to be $216,383. Aspirin use increased 4.7% overall, corresponding to roughly 1750 new users in the eligible candidate population. Significant variation was observed by system in total hours reported, distribution of effort by activity type, and in benefits realized from the intervention.

Keywords
quality improvement; costs; primary prevention; aspirin; cardiovascular disease

Cardiovascular disease (CVD), including acute myocardial infarction (AMI) and stroke, are leading causes of death and disability in the United States.<sup>1</sup> The economic effects of CVD are significant as well. In 2014-2016, the estimated annual total cost of CVD was more than $200 billion, including $21.9 billion in direct medical spending.<sup>2</sup> Given these large health and economic costs, identifying cost-effective strategies to reduce CVD mortality and morbidity may yield significant societal benefits.

Health Information and Libraries Journal
DOI: 10.1111/j.1471-1842.2009.00803.x

Learning from research on the information behaviour of healthcare professionals: a review of the literature 2004–2008 with a focus on emotion
Ina Fourie, Department of Information Science, University of Pretoria, Pretoria, South Africa

Abstract
Objective: A review, focusing on emotion, was conducted of empirical studies on the information behaviour of healthcare professionals (2004–2008). Findings were intended to offer guidelines on information services and information literacy training, to raise gaps in research and to raise research interest.
Method: Databases were searched for literature published from January 2004 to December 2008 and indexed on one, Library and Information Science Abstracts, services, PsycINFO, Social Services Abstracts, Sociological Abstracts, Health Source: Nursing/Academic Edition, Library, Information Science & Technology Abstracts, Psychology and Behaviour Science Collective, Social Work Abstracts, Soc-INDEX with Full Text, SPORTDiscus, cross; and the ISI Web of Knowledge databases. Key journals were manually scanned and abstracts followed. Literature was included if reporting on issues concerning emotion.
Results: Emotion in information behavior in healthcare contexts is scarcely addressed. This review, however, offers some insight into the difficulty in identifying and expressing information needs, sense making and the need to fill knowledge gaps, uncertainty, personality and coping skills, motivation to seeking information, emotional experiences during information seeking, self-confidence and attitude, emotional factors in the selection of information channels and seeking information for psychological or emotional reasons.
Conclusion: Suggestions following findings, address information literacy programs, information services and research gaps.

Key Messages
Implications for Practice
• Address difficulty in identifying information needs.
• Address issues of uncertainty and anxiety.
• Consider impact of personality and coping style on information seeking.
• Consider impact of motivation and promoting motivation to seek information.
• Explore the seeking of information for psychological and emotional issues.

Examples of Comparison Operators in Searches

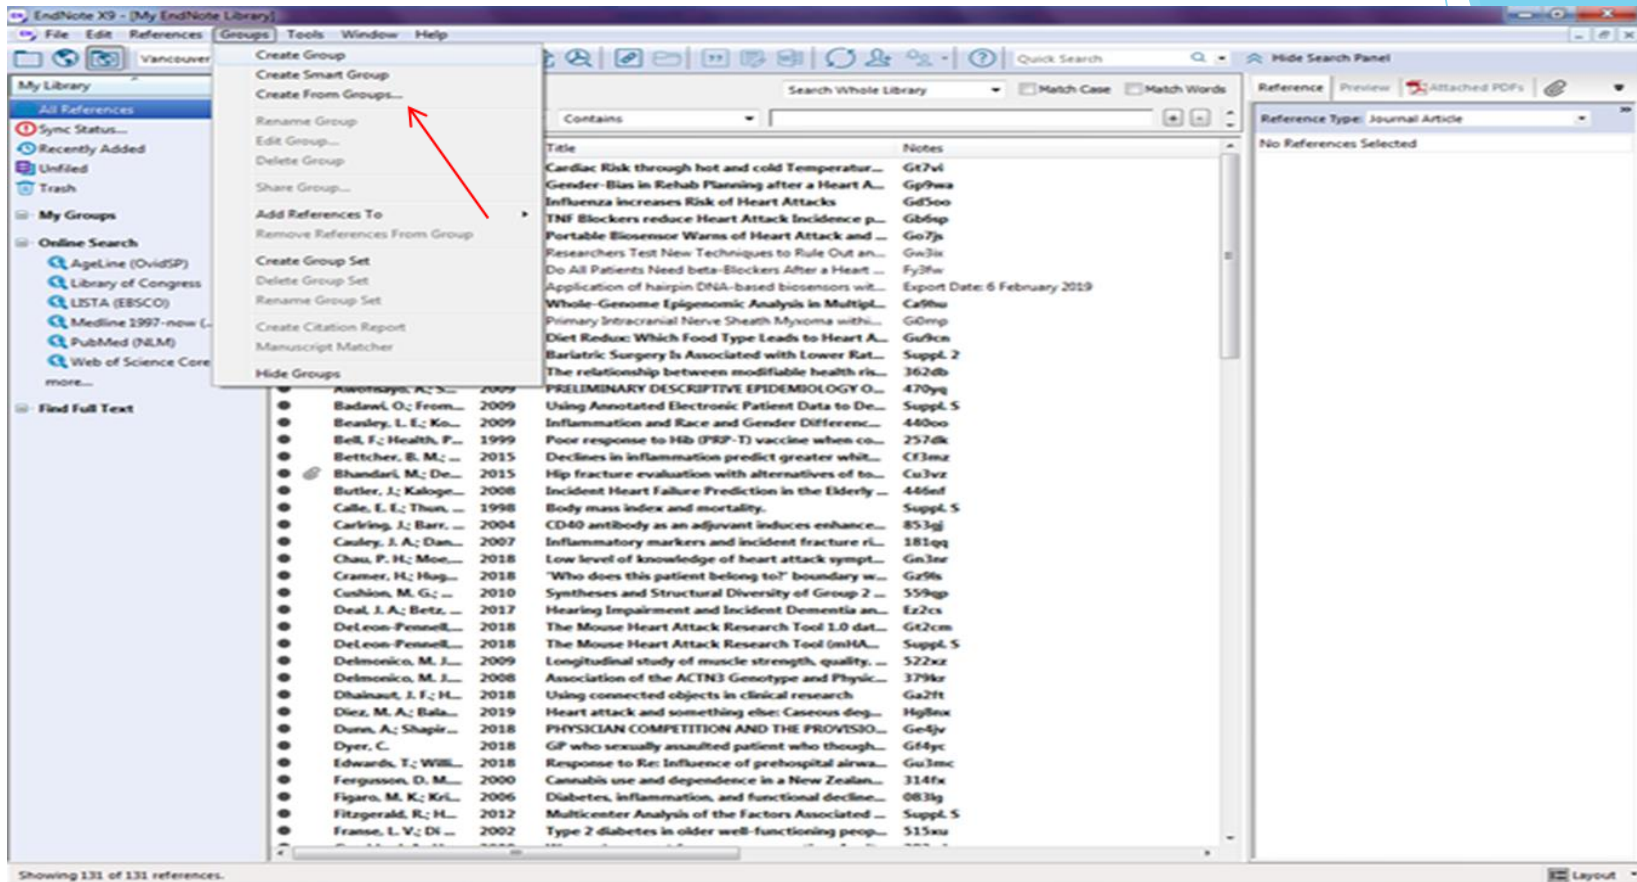

Field	Comparison Operator	Search Term	EndNote finds:
Year	Is greater than	2000	all references published after 2000
Year	Is less than	2000	all references published before 2000
Year	Is greater than or equal to	1998	references published during or after 1998
Title	Is less than	A	all references where titles start with a number
Author	Is less than or equal to	C	all references with authors whose last names begin with A, B, or a number; this would not match a name such as "Carter," as "Ca is greater than C
Author	Is greater than or equal to	S	all references with authors whose last names begin with S-Z
Title	Contains	hawaii	all references with "hawaii in the title
Title	Is	hawaii	all references with "hawaii as the exact title
Abstract	Is		all references with no abstract (empty field)
Title	Field begins with	sediment	all references where titles start with "sediment," including "Sediments," and "Sedimentation," but not "Synsedimentary
Abstract	Field ends with	dinos aur	all references where abstracts end with "dinosaur," which would include "duck-billed dinosaur," but not "dinosaur extinction" or "dinosaurs"
Any Field	Word begins with	house	all references where any field includes a word that begins with "house," which would include text such as "U.S. House of Representatives" and "household," but not "greenhouse"

These options allow you to create multiple bibliographies in a single Microsoft Word document when using Cite While You Write (CWYW). According to the type of style you are working with, choose how citations should appear for each section and document.

Sections

- Create a complete bibliography at the end of the document
- Create a bibliography for each section
  - Continue numbering, or apply settings for disambiguation and repeated citations across sections
- Create a bibliography for each section and a complete bibliography at the end of the document
  - Numbering will continue, and settings for disambiguation and repeated citations will be applied across sections.
