The screenshot shows the 'Vancouver' style editor window. The left sidebar contains a tree view of style categories, with 'Bibliography' selected. The main area displays the following information:

- File Name: Vancouver
- Full Name: Vancouver
- Based on: Uniform Requirements
- Category: Medicine
- Publisher: International Committee of Medical Journal Editors
- URL: http://www.nlm.nih.gov/bsd/uniform_requirements.html
- Created: Sunday, July 3, 2022, 12:10:17
- Last modified: Thursday, April 13, 2017, 23:09:58

Comments and limitations:

Author Guidelines:
http://www.nlm.nih.gov/bsd/uniform_requirements.html

Style Notes:
This style is based on the "Medical Journal" requirements in Citing Medicine published by the NIH. If you need the style that carries the PMCID or NIHMSID numbers please use the Vancouver-NIH style.

If a journal carries continuous pagination throughout a volume (as many medical journals do) the month and issue number may be omitted. The EndNote style for the Uniform Guidelines has chosen to omit the Month from the style in keeping with the most common use of the journal format.

Volume with Supplement: If a Journal Volume carries a supplement number then the supplement number should be inserted in the Volume field preceded by the abbreviation Suppl (no period)

Issue with Supplement: If a Journal issue carries a supplement then the supplement number should be entered into the Issue field preceded by the abbreviation Suppl (no period)

Journal Volume with Part Number: If a Journal Volume carries a part number the part number can either be entered into the Journal Volume field in parenthesis along with the abbreviation Pt (no period); or entered into the issue field preceded by Pt (no period) and it will be enclosed in parenthesis during formatting.

Journal Issue with Part Number: If a Journal Issue carries a part number the part number should be entered into the Issue field preceded by the word Pt (no period)
